Key Highlights

QS China Summit 2026

In Shenzhen, we welcomed over 500 delegates to the Futian Shangri-La Shenzhen. Over two days, our programme explored our theme Connected Cities, Collaborative Campuses.

Jason Newman, Chief Commercial Officer of QS, provided a data-burst, setting the scene for the event. Highlighting the best of QS data, Jason shared insights into student mobility, Chinese institution's reputation and the future of the workforce.

Our multi-language agenda was indicative of the importance of Chinese higher education, with Ben Sowter, Senior Vice President of QS saying, "China has become a vital part of the plan for every university in the world."

Sessions also focused on the changing research landscape. Panellists explored the renewed ambition to generate interdisciplinary research, as global challenges – such as AI – do not fit neatly into individual faculty areas.

For non-Chinese institutions, China is no longer perceived as solely a student recruitment market. Instead, Chinese institutions offer a prospective holistic partner, with opportunities in transnational education, student exchanges and research partners.
